 Description of Property and Eligibility Determination: (Use continuation sheet if necessary and attach map and photo)

This property is typical of a mid-nineteenth century farm in this area. The house is an altered example of a center-hall dwelling. Center-hall dwellings are rectangular houses characterized by a symmetrical organization of rooms on either side of a hallway passing through the center of the house from front to rear. The center passage provides access to the surrounding rooms and usually contains the only exterior doors as well as the stairway to the second floor. One to two-and-one-half stories in height, and one or two rooms deep, the central passage house generally has a side-gable, gambrel, or hipped roof. The house itself has been altered. The building is clad in modern aluminum siding, and modern metal panel doors provide access to the house. The modern front door is framed by two modern sidelights. A modern one-story hipped roof porch spans the front façade of the house. The porch roof is supported by wood posts which rest on brick pillars. The house has lost its integrity due to these modern additions, and is therefore not eligible for listing on the National Register under Criterion C.

This house is an example of the common vernacular farmhouse style which was popular in this area in the mid-nineteenth century. The house is not known to have been associated with any significant individuals, and there is no significant history to the property. In addition, the property has lost integrity of use, as it no longer functions as a farm. The property is therefore not eligible for listing in the National Register under either Criterion A or Criterion B. As per the Maryland Historic Trust letter dating May 15, 2001 (appended at end of document) no archaeological concerns were identified at this time. Therefore the property is therefore not eligible under Criterion D.

The house is a two-story, five bay frame structure with a central gable on the main (west) facade and bracketed-columned porch. The second bay from either end are doorways, suggesting that an older building had been enlarged.

A bankbarn and double corn crib stand near the house.
